

The Burning House

Perched, waiting in the darkness,

Ready to pounce into the open,

About to cause mayhem.

It growls, encouraging attention,

The smoke bursting into the air,

Demolishing anything in its path,

Stealthily moving wherever something turned,

Its eyes as bright as a flame,

Its fur as rough as a burning dagger,

Leaving everything in ruins.

By William